

Dance Of The Dragon, Rock Slyde win at Feel Good Film Festival

10 August, 2009 | By Jeremy Kay

Max Mannix and John Radel's Dance Of The Dragon was named best feel good feature as the Feel Good Film Festival (FGFF) came to a close in Los Angeles.

Jacob Medjuck was crowned best director for Summerhood, Anthony Natale won best actor and Sabrina Lloyd best actress for Universal Signs, and Julie Sagalowsky's A Period Piece won best short.

In further juried awards, Travis Mann, David White and Michael Toay emerged triumphant in the screenplay category for Godspeed, while John Radel was named best cinematographer for Dance Of The Dragon.

In the audience awards, Chris Dowling's Rock Slyde was named best feel good feature and Angelo Salvatore Restaino's short Grande Drip was voted best winner.

The festival ran at the Egyptian Theater from August 7-9 and screened 60 films, including 16 features, 34 shorts, and 10 student films, as well as 2 webisodes.

Print